

Jeff Ifrah rises up the ranks of the Chambers USA 2012 Guide's White Collar Crime and Government Investigations List

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 7, 2012 – The Chambers USA 2012 Guide was published today, and Jeff Ifrah has been listed for the second year in a row, moving up a band in the prestigious ranking for White Collar Crime and Government Investigations attorneys in Washington, DC.

“I am honored to be listed in the Chambers guide again this year,” said Jeff Ifrah. “The nod from Chambers is a validation of what our clients have known all along: great legal representation can be had outside of large institutional law firms, and it can be combined with great client service and rates.”

Chambers published one client’s description of Jeff as being “dedicated to getting a speedy resolution of contentious matters through application of good commercial sense and pragmatic legal thinking.” Other Chambers sources praised Jeff’s approach to legal matters as “honest and hard-working” and emphasized his strong expertise. Chambers noted his recent representation of an online poker operator in a putative class action suit.

Each June, Chambers and Partners publishes one of the leading guides to lawyers and law firms in the US, which is based on a methodology that incorporates information submitted by firms, feedback from clients, and input from the legal marketplace.

The Washington, D.C.-based Ifrah Law, founded in 2009, has grown to 10 attorneys. The firm represents clients in a variety of litigation settings and specializes in internet advertising, igaming, government contracts and healthcare. The firm’s attorneys author two noted blogs, www.crimeinthesuites.com, an analysis of current issues in white collar defense and www.ftcbeat.com, FTC and State AG News for Ecommerce.
